Herpes simplex vs varicella zoster.

What is varicella-zoster? Varicella-zoster is a herpes virus that causes varicella, a common childhood disease. It's highly contagious. If an adult develops varicella, the disease can be more severe. After a person has had the varicella-zoster virus can remain inactive in the body for many years. Zoster herpes (herpes zoster) occurs when the virus becomes active again. What diseases causes varicella-zoster? Varicella first occurs as a blistering rash and fever. It takes 10-21 days after exposure for someone to develop smallpox. The wounds occur commonly in batches with different stages (blows, blisters, and wounds) present at the same time. The blisters usually rupture within five days. A person with varicella is infectious 1-2 days before the skin eruption appears and until a 1 l bladders have formed crusts. Children with impaired immune system may have blisters that occur for a prolonged period of time. Adults may develop severe pneumonia and other serious complications. Zoster herpes occurs when the virus, which has been inactive for some time, becomes active again. There are severe pain and numbness along the nervous pathways, commonly on the trunk or face. vesicle groups appear one to five days later. The bladders are usually on one side of the body and closer to each other than in the varicella. Zoster herpes does not spread from one person to another. If people who have never had smallpox come into contact with the fluid from the bladder of herpes zoster, they can develop smallpox. Can you take smallpox if you have been vaccinated? Thanks! Approximately fifteen% 20% of people who have received a dose of varicella vaccine (varicella vaccine) still contract varicella if exposed, Their disease is usually mild. Vaccinated people showing the chickenpox generally have less than 50 spots or protuberances, which can look like insect bites more than the typical varicelle, full of liquid liquids In 2006, the Advisory Committee on Immunisation Practices (ACIP) voted to recommend routine two-dose varicella vaccination for children. In one study, children who received two doses of chickenpox vaccine were three times less likely to get chickenpox than people who had only one dose. Are varicella strains the diseases closed? Symptoms may be more severe in infants, people with weakened immune systems, and adults. Serious problems may occur and may include pneumonia (bacterial and viral), brain infection (encephalitis) and kidney problems. Many people are not aware that before a vaccine was available, about 10,600 people were hospitalized, and 100 to 150 died, as a result of chickenpox in the United States every year. What should I do about exposure to chickenpox? If you have been in contact with someone with chickenpox or tiles, or if you have a disease associated with the rash that could be chickenpox or tiles, discuss your situation with your doctor. Blood tests may be done to see if you have been infected with the virus or have had the disease in the past. If you are pregnant and not immune and have been exposed to chickenpox or shingles, call your healthcare provider immediately. Your provider may choose to treat you with a drug called Varicella-Zoster immune globulin (Vzig), but for this drug to be very useful, it should be given as soon as possible after exposure to chickenpox. I'm pregnant and I've recently been exposed to someone with chickenpox. How will you do this exposure or my pregnancy? Susceptible pregnant women are at risk for associated complications when contracting chickenpox. Varicella infection causes a serious disease in pregnant women and 10%-20% of infected with developing varicella pneumonia, with mortality (mortal) reported up to 40%. Because of these risks, pregnant pregnant women Testing for immunity to varicella that has been exposed to the virus can be given varicella-zoster immune globulina (VZIG) to reduce the risk of complications of the disease. If you are pregnant and you have never had smallpox, and you get smallpox during the first semester (about twenty weeks) of your pregnancy, there is a slight risk (0,4% to 2%) of birth defects or abortion. The second half of your pregnancy, the child can have an infection without having symptoms and then get them (zoster) later in life. Infants whose mothers develop varicella eruption from five days before two days after delivery is at risk for neonatal varicella, associated with mortality up to 30%. These children should receive preventive treatment with varicella-zoster immune globulin (Vzig). I'm pregnant and I had a blood test for smallpox. What do the results of this test show? The blood test can show you: they are immune (they have already had varicella disease or varicella vaccine) and have no sign of recent infection. You have nothing more to worry about. They're not immune and they haven't been infected yet. You should avoid anyone with smallpox during pregnancy. Had or recently had an infection. You should discuss the risks for your stage of pregnancy with your healthcare provider. Is there a way I can avoid being infected with smallpox? Yes, make sure all vaccines are up to date, especially if you are planning a pregnancy. Vaccination is the best way to protect yourself and those you love. If you're not immune, you should be vaccinated. You will receive two doses of varicella vaccine (varicella) one month apart. You should avoid getting pregnant for at least a month after your last vaccination. The varicella vaccine does not be given to pregnant women. If you are pregnant, make a health care provider give you the smallpox vaccine after your baby is Shingles Vaccination, what you should know: The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends the vaccine against lip herpes (STAVVAX) for 60-year-olds and older people. This is a once-in-a-lifetime vaccination to prevent lip herpes. There is no maximum age to obtain the vaccine against lip herpes. Anyone 60-year-old or older must obtain the vaccine for lip herpes, regardless of whether they remember having had smallpox or not. Studies show that more than 99% of Americans 40's and older have had smallpox, even if donated 128; t remember having received the disease. The risk of getting zoster herpes starts to increase around the 50's. However, the vaccine against lip herpes (STAVAX) is only recommended for people who are 60-year-old and older because © The safety and efficacy of the vaccine have only been studied in this age group. Even if you have had zoster herpes, you can still receive the herpes zoster vaccine to help prevent future events of the disease. There is no specific time that you should expect after having had zoster herpes before receiving the vaccine against lip herpes. The decision on when to give the vaccine should be made with your doctor. In general, a person should make sure that the rash of lip herpes has disappeared before being vaccinated.
